

Pi Points - FAQ

What jobs give me Pi Points?

- Doing someone's party job when they forget or can't find a replacement
– 10 pre/post, 30 first shift, 40 second shift
- Doing someone's house job when they forget or can't find a replacement – 20
- Doing someone's meal crew when they forget or can't find a replacement - 20

When do I:

Receive Pi Points? – When you do someone's job when they aren't able to do it because they forgot or couldn't find a replacement.

Lose Pi Points? – When you forget to do or couldn't find a replacement for a job. You also receive the summon that you would get normally.

Spend Pi Points? – When you have enough to exchange for a job AND there is someone willing to take it.

Why should I take someone's job when they're spending their Pi Points to get out of it?

If you have a summon or bone because of a missed job you may remove it early by completing another person's job and spending the difference with points (if the job is not worth enough points to equal the bone/summon). Any extra points will be added to your total Pi Points. If not enough points are available to equal the worth of the bone/summon, then the points may either be put towards removing the bone/summon or added to your total. You may also just opt to receive the points without eliminating a bone/summon.

Can I eliminate bones/summons with Pi Points alone?

No, you must complete a job. The job can be worth less than your bone as long as you also spend the appropriate amount of points to make them equal.

Can I spend points in order to have my job taken when I have negative points?

No. You can lose them, however.

What happens if I can't fully pay off a bone so I choose to reduce it, but then the bone expires?

The spent points are NOT returned to your total.

What if I receive a summon/bone for not doing my job properly?

If you do your job but it is not done properly according to the summoning person then you will receive the summon like normal but points will not be deducted. It may still be removed normally at the discretion of the summoning person (this is mostly only relevant to party jobs).

Example Case 1:

Joe has Thursday Lunch Meal Crew. On Thursday morning he goes out to eat with his parents who are in town, but he forgets he has meal crew and also leaves his phone in his room. 11:00 rolls around and his meal crew partner is left alone and in a panic. Luckily, Joe's roommate Greg is free and completes Joe's meal crew.

What happens: Joe loses 20 Pi Points and receives a summon for missing meal crew.

Greg gains 20 Pi Points for covering Joe's meal crew.

Later that day, Greg is feeling especially lazy but has the Thursday City Bathroom house job. He knows that he has 20 Points which is enough for a house job and also sees that Joe has a summon for missing a meal crew. He sends a request to Joe for him to take his house job. Joe receives this request and accepts it.

What happens: Greg Spends 20 Pi Points

Joe "gains" 20 Pi Points and immediately spends them to remove his summon.

Greg finishes the day at 0 Pi Points

Joe finishes the day at -20 Pi Points

Why does Greg have 0 points while Joe has -20? Didn't they complete the same amount of work?

The important difference to remember here is that Joe's absence was not planned and could have gone uncovered. Greg's absence was planned and was a reward for him stepping up and taking a job at an earlier time.

Example 2:

Bob is such a diligent brother that he currently has a total of 130 Pi points. He's also a senior, and for some reason is given a second shift party job. He wants someone to take his job, but no one has any bones. He calls the Pi Point system stupid and worthless and proceeds to not do his party job out of spite for the system. No one covers his shift.

What happens: Bob loses 40 points and receives a summon for missing a second shift party job.

Since Bob did not read this FAQ very thoroughly, he thinks he can just spend some of his remaining 90 Pi Points and his summon will just go away. This is not possible. Bob MUST take someone else's job in order to remove a bone/summon. After being told this, Bob reluctantly takes Fred's meal crew. Fred has 20 Pi points to spend so he figures he'll help Bob get rid of his summon and not have to do meal crew at the same time.

What happens: Bob "gains" 20 Pi points and then spends additional 20 Pi Points and removes his 40 point summon.

Fred Spends 20 Pi Points.

Alternate Ending: Bob is clinically insane and never had any Pi Points to begin with. That means after skipping the job he ended up with -40 points and a summon. He did Fred's meal crew and has reduced his summon to only 20 points, but still has it as well as -40 points. It eventually turns into a 20 point bone which he can still remove by doing another 20 point job, but he is still at a deficit of -40. The bone eventually expires but the points spent towards reducing it are not returned.
